FOREWORD.

The main purpose of SUCCESSFUL AMERICANS of the Twentieth Century, both Local and National, is to preserve and perpetuate the names and achievements of the Leading Men of America now living, who have attained some prominence in the Social, Industrial, Commercial and Public affairs of this great Commonwealth of ours.

This Series of Biographical Americana will be an invaluable acquisition to the World of Literature, and is specially designed for use in the reference rooms of the great public libraries throughout the world, and for constant reference in the Sanctum Sanctorums of the principal newspapers offices of America. This Series is ultimately destined to go down to posterity as an enduring record of the most prominent people of the United States; bearing in mind that without such a record some of the most noteworthy names would be lost in oblivion, and their posterity deprived of the gratification and advantage of reference to so honorable an ancestry.

One whole page and a permanent number will be assigned to each and every man of prominence, and the editors are only too pleased to receive data to the end that each and every one may obtain due recognition and an authentic record which will be corrected and expanded from time to time in succeeding editions of this United Press Service Library.

These representative Citizens of character and influence, by their enterprise and thrift, by their activity and sagacity in business, and by their zeal in educational, social and public matters, have contributed vastly to the moral, spiritual and material prosperity of the community in which they live; and in the preservation of such a record progressive men of life and thought should have a national pride.

As the failure to consider the lives of men of affairs as of historical importance is a defective feature of all biographical works heretofore published, a special feature of this Series will include the lives of the great merchants, manufacturers, railroad builders, and other practical men who have developed the mines, forests and farms, built the railroads, steamboat lines and canals, organized the corporations, and introduced the new processes in science and mechanics, which have so greatly reduced the cost and promoted the comfort of living, while contributing to the power and prestige of the nation itself.

Mistakes will undoubtedly be found in this volume, but they exist not for want of painstaking efforts to avoid them, but generally from imperfect manuscripts or conflicting statements of standard authorities. What is worth recording at all, is worth recording carefully and correctly; and when mistakes are discovered, a memorandum of the errors should at once be sent to the publishers for correction in future editions of this work.
